

DOWNTOWN AND MIDTOWN

Many Houstonians say that the most exciting addition to the skyline is the new Minute Maid baseball stadium, but it is not the only exciting change happening downtown. “Loft living” is adding a new dimension to the real estate options for Houston residents. Midtown, just south of downtown, with its diverse restaurants and boutique shopping has also experienced a townhouse boom. The proximity to downtown is very appealing to a growing segment of buyers. Access to work, the theatre district, musical venues and restaurants enhances downtown living.

The metro rail from the Medical Center to downtown has made life even easier! Abandoned buildings are once again becoming gracious, desirable addresses and hundreds of new townhouse projects have brought life back to this section of town. The lofts offer wide-open floor plans and exposed brick walls, not unlike the SoHo district in New York. In addition, many lovely historic buildings have been reborn as sophisticated condominiums for sale or lease to the eager public. There is an appealing variety of housing opportunities.
